

This is the letter 'ALEPH:

It is basically silent.

Officially it is a glottal stop. It is the first sound you make when you start to say "ouch" (before the "o").

Transliterations might show it as a left-opening apostrophe.

It is the first letter of the aleph-bet and stands for the number 1.

Notice that it is open or pointing to all directions.

This is the letter KHAFF:

It sounds like someone clearing their throat.

It stands for the number 20.

Its name means the "palm of a hand" or a "spoon." Notice that it is shaped like them.

It has no dot (dagesh) in it.

Transliterations here will show it as a "KH." Sometimes transliterations will show it as "ch" (but it doesn't sound like "ch" as in choose).

This is the letter MEM:

It sounds like M.

It stands for the number 40.

It looks like a Mountain, or a Mound.

Some people see a Missile on the top.

The bottom has a missing piece.

This is the letter `AYIN:

It is basically silent.

Officially it is a voiced glottal stop. It is like an 'aleph, but with some sound.

It stands for the number 70.

Its name means "eye" and seems to look like an eye (sideways?).
